

Ocean animals

I am a sea anemone,
I cling to rocks in the bay,
If you are prey, I'd go away,
For I have tentacles to gobble you up,
So, come if you dare and I'll eat you up.

I'm a starfish,
I taste what I walk on,
I am sick in my food and I then eat it,
I can stick to rocks where I am swept towards.

I am a clownfish,
I'm very bright,
My colours are both orange and white,
I begin my life as a male and then when I am a special size I unlike others I'll turn female,
If a predator chases me, I'll hide in anemones until they are gone because I don't get stung.

Under the Sea!

As I dived into the water, I tasted the horrible taste of salty sea,

The sea was like a glittering chandelier in a ballroom,

All the animals were parting like people,

I saw the sharks, dancing then diving for dinner,

I touched the waves as they quickstepped across the water,

I heard the splashing of the dolphins as they leapt over the water,

I smelt the disgusting smell of seaweed, and saw them swaying under me,

The waves were all smiling and the angel fish were all singing silly songs,

The colourful fish were swimming in symmetrical patterns,

Suddenly the sea exploded into a giant party,

The huge whales wiggled like worms,

Octopuses were squirting ink like paintings,

And there were lots of openmouthed fish staring at the eels, who were dancing the salsa.
